Sustainability in Action

The Great Transition: Asia's Path to Decarbonisation

Asia, responsible for half of the world's carbon emissions, faces an urgent challenge to decarbonise while meeting the Paris Agreement's goals. Rapid economic expansion has fueled rising infrastructure needs and energy demands, making the transition from brown to green seem daunting.

Yet, with vast natural carbon sinks, a wave of innovative technologies, and a generational shift towards sustainable practices, there is hope.

How can Asia balance economic growth with environmental sustainability?
Join us to explore how:

- CSOs are integrating sustainability into core strategies and business operations
- The MAS-launched Gprnt platform will tackle ESG data and reporting challenges - supporting businesses' and Singapore's broader environmental goals
- Digital infrastructure stakeholders balance the mounting computational needs with the desire for net zero impact on the environment
